with no buildings higher than six storeys, Allisee is a haven of openness, subtlety, and space."

All seven of Allisee's architecturally demure buildings offer high-end penthouses and two- and three-bedroom apartments. Like the sprawling layout, the interiors value open space – apartments range from 110m² up to two-storey penthouses at 387m², inclusive of balcony space. Finishes and fittings of the highest standard, ample natural light, cross ventilation and generous-sized balconies are among the features shared by all the apartments.

But it is the environment itself which is Allisee's trump card. Allisee has its own sheltered internal harbour with moorings that open directly onto the Broadwater. Deep-water ocean access opens up a range of cruising options for residents – from lazy day trips to serious fishing expeditions.

"There are 19 marine berths available to penthouse buyers – marine berths offered as part of a development are a rare find," Dickinson says.

Allisee represents a persuasive combination of amenities, waterfront living and sheer relaxation.

Top: The latest furnishings and top-end fixtures and finishes, such as limestone tiles, are all part of the interiors' aesthetics. Large sliding doors open onto the expansive balconies.

Above: Double-height interiors in the penthouses have views of the Broadwater. Cross ventilation and generous balconies create cool, comfortable environments.

Right: Seclusion from the living spaces is a priority in all master suites. Penthhouse master bedrooms have walk-in wardrobes and attached bathrooms have 12-jet spas and marble vanities.

to Stockland's challenge of creating a visually expressive masterplan for Allisee's 6.3ha of Broadwater-fronting land. Every aspect of the design reflects and complements the coastal setting.

Designed to maximise open space and create a sense of freedom, Allisee embraces three fundamental principles – absolute privacy, maximum appreciation of the water views, and an enhanced connection to the marina and the sea beyond.

"With a focus on the central marina and its link to the Broadwater, the masterplan consists of a dynamic layout of buildings overlooking the water," says Dickinson. "Released in two stages,
