AMERICAN BEAUTY

James Houston's idyllic Catskills hideaway

Graphic heart

Contrasting hues and textures add the individual touch.

INTERIOR DESIGNER ANDREA D'CRUZ OF RLD "This kitchen is in a development we initially worked on. We were later commissioned to convert the penthouse and an apartment below into one large five-bedroom apartment for a professional executive. The kitchen consists of a monochromatic and highly contrasting palette. Surfaces and forms are treated graphically – they intersect and extend to create visual and tactile interest, while also fulfilling all the practicalities required for a functional kitchen. Handmade Moroccan tiles on the splashback extend into the dining room. They introduce something tactile and uneven, and imperfect into the refined apartment, with its reflective, smooth surfaces."

Wave action

Pattern plays in black and white make a splash.

INTERIOR DESIGNER ANDREA D'CRUZ OF RLD "This bathroom is in a development we initially worked on. We were later commissioned to convert the penthouse and an apartment below into one large five-bedroom apartment. This ensuite off the main bedroom consists of a monochromatic and highly contrasting palette, with generous application of timber veneer, stone and mirror. Fittings were chosen for their simplicity and purity of form and detail. Functional aspects, such as floor-to-ceiling storage cabinets, are concealed within timber veneer wall panels and lighting integrated within joinery recesses."
